Dr. William Scott White Dead.

Dr. William Scott White died at his home on Jefferson street Monday afternoon after an illness extending through several years. On account of feeble health he had not been in the active practice of his profession for two years.

Dr. White was the youngest son of the late Mr. William White and was aged 48 years. His mother was a Miss Spruell of Augusta county. He held degrees from three schools—A. B. from Washington and Lee University and M. D. from the University of Virginia and the University of New York. After graduation he was resident physician for several years in a leading New York hospital. He located in Lexington for the practice of medicine and, on account of his "mild" qualifications was soon recognized as one of the leading physicians of the community. He was regarded by the profession as a superior medical adviser and he was frequently called in consultation in difficult and intricate cases. For years he enjoyed a large practice and was held in high esteem by his numerous patients.

Dr. White is survived by his wife, who is a daughter of the late Col. Andrew W. Cameron, and four children, Miss Frances S. White, a teacher in the Lexington public schools; Miss Eleanor W. White, who teaches near Raphine; William White, a cadet at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Archie White; also by two brothers, Mr. John S. White of Clifton Forge; Mr. Arch S. White of Lynchburg, and two sisters, Miss Nettie White and Mrs. Harry D. Irwin of Minneapolis, Minn.

The funeral services were held at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the Presbyterian church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Thornton Whaling. Interment was made in Lexington cemetery.

Badly Burned.

Sam Hamilton, the motor-power of THE GAZETTE's cylinder press, was severely burned the night before Christmas. He was sitting up with a sick child and close to a red-hot stove, and, while leaning over the stove, he began nodding. His "bawling" became quite low, and came in contact with the stove. The red stove removed the skin from his forehead and hands with the facility that a banana can be peeled. He is now at his usual place "grinding" out THE GAZETTE.

How Christmas Was Spent in Lexington.

Usually Christmas commences in Lexington with the setting of the sun December 24th. It is heralded by the boom and burst of cannon crackers. This continual popping was kept up until a late hour in the night. Daylight was announced Christmas morning by an incessant cannonade of pop-crackers in every part of the town and shouts of the wildest enjoyment and joy among the children.

A Christmas day nearer the ideal than last Thursday never dawned. Snow and Christmas will never be dissociated. For years Christmas has been warm in Lexington and people constantly remarked, "This does not seem like Christmas; it is too warm; one expects snow."

All were prepared to enjoy Christmas, no matter what the weather was, but when the snow came Christmas-Eve night, and Christmas day dawned bright and cold with patches of snow upon the streets, nature had arrayed herself in keeping with every tradition of the holiday, and left not one thing wanting to make happiness complete. At night thousands of little stars peeped down upon the earth looking like little bonfires in the far distance.

Since the bar-room has been relegated to a past age, and liquor cannot be bought in Lexington except surreptitiously, there was no reckoning before the mayor Friday. Happily there was not a serious accident from the crackers and sky-rockets.

CHRISTMAS AT THE CHURCHES.

The joyous Christmas-tide was made the occasion of much pleasure to the children of the various Sunday schools of the community.

The entertainment at Grace Memorial Episcopal church took place on Christmas-Eve at 4 o'clock. The decorations were pretty and appropriate. A beautiful Christmas tree was laden with gifts for the little folks. The exercises were presided over by the superintendent, Mr. John D. Letcher, and conducted by Rev. Dr. R. J. McBryde, the rector, and consisted of songs, responsive readings and carols by the school. Miss Anna Anderson was the organist. Miss Lydia Ridgeley was awarded a prize for regular attendance.

On Christmas-Eve, at 5 o'clock, the Sunday school of the Presbyterian church assembled in the lecture room for their entertainment. A lovely tree surmounted the platform. The superintendent, Mr. Frank T. Glasgow, presided. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Thornton Whaling, opened with prayer, and Dr. W. S. Currell delivered an interesting address. Interesting songs and carols were sung by the school, with Miss Lilly Cartlett as organist. A nice treat of candy, nuts, oranges, etc., was given the children. On behalf of the board of deacons, Dr. Jas. Lewis Howe presented the sexton, Osella Coles, with a $5 gold piece for faithful services during the year. He responded in a neat speech of thanks and closed with the original couplet, wishing for his friends,

"Peace at home and pleasure abroad.
Honor your wives and serve the Lord."

The entertainment at Beechenbrook Sunday school took place Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Beautiful Christmas trees adorned the platform. The decorations were elaborate and attractive. The excellent program rendered consisted of carols by the school and the singing was especially interesting. Every member of the school received a nice treat consisting of candy, nuts and oranges. The exercises were conducted by Mr. J. McD. Adair, the superintendent, and were furnished by a choir of trained voices, with Miss Ann Benson as organist.

The entertainment of the Trinity Methodist Sunday school was held Friday night, witnessed by a large company of friends. An interesting program was carried out, consisting of songs, recitations, and responsive readings. A treat consisting of candy, nuts, oranges and apples was given all the members of the school. The exercises opened with a procession led by a number of children who carried bells and kept time with the music. The invocation was made by Mr. J. M. Senseney, and a short address by the pastor, Rev. J. H. Light. The superintendent, Mr. Wm. R. Kennedy, conducted the exercises. Misses Bessie Quisenberry and Bookie Campbell presided at the organ. Rev. D. H. Kern of Harrisonburg, pronounced the benediction.

Mr. R. E. Hutton made reports for the secretary and treasurer, which showed enrollment in main school to be 141 and 109 in the Sunday school. One teacher and fourteen scholars were present every Sunday during the year, and were rewarded with prizes. One child, Elwood Seal, has not missed a Sunday in four years. The school has raised during the year for incidental expenses $122 and for missions $225, making a total of $347.

A Parson's Noble Act.

"I want all the world to know," writes Rev. C. J. Budlong of Ashaway, R. I., "what a thoroughly good and reliable medicine I found in Electric Bitters. They cured me of jaundice and liver troubles that had caused me great suffering for many years. For a genuine, all-around cure they excel anything I ever saw." Electric Bitters are the surprise of all for their wonderful work in Liver, Kidney and Stomach troubles. Don't fail to try them. Only 50 cts. Satisfaction is guaranteed by B. H. Go. & drugist.

Staunton's Jail on Fire.

Fire broke out in the County Jail in Staunton Sunday night, December 28th, which came near resulting fatally to some of its occupants.

The fire originated from a furnace in the cellar of the jail and had made such headway before the alarm was turned in that the prisoners on the second and third floors were nearly suffocated before the fire department reached the scene.

The jailer could not be found for some moments, and it seemed that nothing could be done to save some of the prisoners from suffocation. They were in an awful panic, screaming and crying.

Their friends and relatives on the outside were running to them with wet handkerchiefs, which they passed through the bars, while others with hammers were trying to break in the heavy doors. After the arrival of the jailer the doors were opened and the prisoners removed to the courthouse and the fire was soon gotten under control.

The jail physician was called to examine the prisoners after they were removed to the courthouse and stated that he thought no serious harm had been done them.

Two white men and one colored prisoner were considerably affected by the smoke, however.

From My Study Window.

The following interesting sketch appeared in the Christmas number of the Central Presbyterianian and is from the pen of Rev. Dr. Thornton Whaling, who for seven years has been the popular pastor of the Lexington Presbyterian church. We regret that we have not space to reproduce the entire article, which fills two columns of the Presbyterianian.

As I sit in my study and muse before the fire, the thought of all the godly pastors who have sat just where I am sitting now, comes to encourage and stimulate and fill with serious reflections the heart of the pastor of these latest years. Most of these "men of God" have finished their course with joy, and their mission of useful service here has been crowned with the larger life and work of the "city which hath no walls."

They prayed, and studied, and wrought out their sermons, and counseled inquirers after the way of life, and ministered comfort to God's saints, and thought over the problems of the peculiar mission of the church they were appointed to serve. * * *

"The manse" has usually been filled with boys and girls, who have grown up to refute, without a single exception, I believe, the vile slander that "preachers' children are the worst in the world." From many a manse, as here, have gone sons brave and faithful to forms of highest service for country, and church, and God; and "daughters" polished after the similitude of a palace, to make glad not only "the city of God," but the "sons of men." How seldom (I have never seen it at all) from "the manse" comes the unprincipled man or the worldly, Christless woman, Satan's masterpiece and perdition's confederate!

From this study window the pastors have looked, with prayerful hearts and tender interest upon the homes of the people whom they loved and served. Presbyterianism is strong (may it ever grow stronger!) in the Valley of Virginia, and more than a score of Presbyterian churches adorn and enrich the county of which this is the capital and center. The town itself enjoys the distinction of having the largest Presbyterian congregation and church of any town of its size in our whole Assembly. * * *

Across the roadway, the most distinct of all objects visible from the study window, is the quiet and beautiful "God's Acre," where, for more than a century, faith and love have laid to rest their dead. At its gateway a stately entrance stands the site of the old church in which the famous and beloved pastors of the earlier days fulfilled their ministry. Only a few are left to tell us of the preaching and singing and discipline of the fathers fifty to a hundred years ago. Hard by stands the venerable old oak, known to have reached far more than a hundred years, under the shade of whose branches the gospel was preached for so many years, and at whose feet, sleeping his last sleep, rests the body of one who served the church for half a century as an honored and useful elder. An ideal resting place for the veteran elder and servant of God! * * *

More than a score of Presbyterian ministers sleep within this sacred enclosure. And the pastors of other days are here: one, the wise-hearted, tactful, tender "man of God" who gathered so many into the kingdom, and who served the church so faithfully in the stormy days of war; another, the brilliant, gifted, inspired preacher, whose words were musical, whose thoughts were like the lightning swift and clear, and whose heart was a fire kindled from the very altar of God; another, "a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost," whose wisdom, divinely given, never failed, whose speech in the pulpit and out of it was always "seasoned with salt," whose ministry was sealed of God as fully as any with which the church was ever blessed. These are here, and as the pastor looks toward the graves of these brother-pastors, who went before him in the service to which he is now called, he cannot help but pray that he may bequeath to the pastors who are to come after him a heritage of behavior and devotion which may fitly be joined to the noble heritage which these "men of God" have left to him. Amen.

S. S. Committee to Meet.

Secretary V. W. Davis of Timber Ridge, has issued a call from President A. S. Montgomery of Colliers-town, for a meeting at the Court House in Lexington, Monday, January 5, 1903, of the executive committee of the Rockbridge County Sunday School Association. A full meeting of the officers and district vice-presidents is urgently requested, as important business will be considered.

Profitable Farming.

Stanton Argus.

Some Augusta people who think that trucking does not pay may be convinced by this: R. H. Gawn, of the Northern Neck, from 42 acres of land has sold $200 worth of tomatoes at 20 cents a bushel, producing an average of $60 an acre. James E. Dameron, of the same section, from five acres of land sold tomatoes at 20 cents a bushel to the amount of $202. Another incident of profitable farming is shown by Henry Blundon of Northumberland county, who raised this year 180 barrels of corn from a 15 acre field.

In Memory of Hon. John Randolph Tucker.

Since the death of Hon. John Randolph Tucker, at five years ago, it has been the custom of his son, Hon. H. St. George Tucker, to celebrate the anniversary of his birth by inviting the friends of his illustrious father to partake of egg-nog at his residence, Wednesday evening, December 24th, it being the 76th year since the birth of Mr. Tucker. During Mr. Tucker's lifetime he observed this day in a similar manner.

The weather was unpropitious, as it snowed in the early evening and continued into the night, but a good assemblage was present about nine o'clock. Among those there were Rev. Dr. Thornton Whaling, Prof. A. L. Nelson, Col. J. D. H. Ross, F. T. Glasgow, Judge S. H. Letcher, F. H. Brockenbrough, Thos. S. White, S. R. Moore, Col. Robert Catlett, A. Terry Shields, J. P. Moore, Dr. J. Lewis Howe, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Pendleton, J. Houston Leech, Dr. A. D. Estill, Major Harrison K. West, Dr. and Mrs. Reid White, Thomas A. Sterrett, W. T. Shields, W. Dunlap, J. Scott Moore and Messrs. D. H. Rucker and John T. McKee of Buena Vista.

After the company had assembled, the guests were invited to the dining room where they were welcomed by the host. He very feelingly alluded to the missed presence of the former editor of THE GAZETTE, E. H. Barclay, who last year made a pleasant and impressive talk in response to the welcome extended them. This duty this year devolved upon Col. J. D. H. Ross, who has few equals in Virginia on occasions of this character. He touchingly alluded to the Hon. John Randolph Tucker, as their friend, and as a friend to humanity; his influence with men of national character, and how he conciliated such leaders as Garfield, Tom Reed, Blaine, and the ruling spirits of the North, and forced them to think better of the Southern people. He declared our host was worthy son of such a sire, and was destined to fill the place of this great Virginia lawyer. With bowed heads, and in silence, a toast was drunk to the memory of Hon. John Randolph Tucker.

After the exercises were completed in the dining room the company repaired to the spacious parlor and a library, which were thrown into one room by the sliding doors pushed ajar, where delightful singing of old songs was dispensed, such as "Tenting Tonight," "Annie Laurie," etc., by a choir composed of Dr. and Mrs. Reid White, Prof. A. L. Nelson, Dr. J. Lewis Howe, Col. J. D. H. Ross and Mrs. E. M. Pendleton. Miss Sadie Preston presided at the piano. When the hour of 10 o'clock came the choir beautifully rendered "Auld Lang Syne" and the company dispersed.

During the intervals of these songs Col. Ross entertained the audience with his inimitable story-telling, which convulsed his hearers into paroxysms of laughter and applause.
